To the DAILY GAZETTEER.

SIR,

I AM in the State of one of those Sinners, who having been under Temptation to commit Sacrilege, Incest, or some other enormous Sin, has, by long combating with it, and opposing to it Reason and Resolution, overcome that Temptation, and, like him, I now abhor the

I was about to be drawn into, as much as I can, your'd to do the Good from which I was flying. You must know then, that I had, by my own frequent and serious Calculations, found myself in a State of extraordinary Deservings; having a Hundred Times run all Hazards, except Hanging and Beheading, in the Service of my dear Country, without having been the least taken of, unless, as usual, at Election for Shire-Knight, or Burgess in our Borough-Town, in both of which I have a Vote, and consequently am Somebody. Then, indeed, I have had a great deal of Honour, and as low a one as ever was made him by dedicating Poet: But soon as the Election was over, 'twas b'w'ye Will, that Compliment was to last till the next Seven Years after.

HOWEVER, notwithstanding such Ingratitude, Zeal did not flag upon any, or upon no, Occasion, when I thought fit to display it. Often have I been beaten and bullied by Patriots, because I would not desert the Old Country Party, and list in the New, under the Jacobites, Tories, and Grumblers. I bore with Patience, in full Assurance, that such common Merit would, this Year or the next, exact Returns from the Publick; and that it was impossible it should meet with the Rewards so common, and almost universally, complained of, Neglect and Forgetfulness: But I was told by a Friend, who had seen his whole Estate in Place-hunting, that there were many Thousands who pretended to the like Degree of extraordinary Merit; and that it would take a Century, if a Minister could so long live, to recollect the several Pretenders Calculations of their own Deserts, to the Standard of Truth; after which it would be easy for him to content them All, if they could be determin'd by that Standard.

I WAS in no Disposition to admit of any one's Continuity as to my Deservings, that Affair having been already so fully decided and settled by myself; and was perfectly well satisfied that they were rather superior than equal to any Recompences: And finding that the Ministers, notwithstanding all my enuancing Representations, made no great Haste to take into my Sentiments, I, who had always been a Whig, a Williamite, a Country-Party-Man, and a Patriot again, resolved to turn Grumbler in Revenge. There's Mr. Such-a-one, said I to myself, Was not he as much a Whig as you are, in the worst as you are in the best of Times? And is he not now a Top-Patriot, merely by the Strength of his Reputation? Was not my Lord Such-a-one as much a Grumbler as you could be for the Life of you? and yet he was never taken for a Whig, before he turned Grumbler. This you may be sure of, said I again to myself, that by turning Grumbler, you will immediately lose the Reputation of a Whig and a Patriot; where, being only a True Englishman, you are sure of being but being abus'd by the Craftsmen, Common-Men, and the Rabble, drunk or not drunk, if it happen to ken you, which is worth looking to.

HAVING weighed these Matters with as much Deliberation as ever did any Counsel to the Tribe of Grumblers, I came to a Resolution to be One of them, and to fall Soule on the Ministry, and every Body else, not like, all at once, in Letters to Mr. Squire D'Amers. I began with what Faults I could pick. I could easily have found every Thing that was done into Bribery and Corruption: But as impudent as I found myself at that time, I commenc'd Grumbler, I was ashamed to use the Words that had render'd Mr. Squire D'Amers so famous. I thought of falling upon the Aids of Parliament, particularly the Grumbler's, flattering myself it would be very easy to get the taking away from Trueborn Englishmen the Privilege of being drunk, which they had been in Possession of ever since the Reign of K. Canute, was an outrageous Invasion of Liberty; but I was frighten'd out of that, by a Doubt of a Friend of mine, that the Solicitor to the Excise would bring an Action of Scandalum Magnatum against me, for abusing my Betters, who had laudably exerted their Zeal, in the Execution of that Act. Another Topick I had in my Eye was the Stading Army, but somebody told me, the late Letter about it in Common Sense was so dull and stupid, that till the Soldiers had done something worse than hitherto they have been charged with, to make a new Noise, the attempting it would do them more Good than Hurt.

SINCE all this would not do, I purpos'd to fly my Kite as high as it could go, and pick out Faults in the ——— himself. What, said I to myself, do not all our Parry do it, as openly as the Wretches in Bridewell, who also are some of us, sold Drams, tho' none of us have yet been sent thither for any Thing else? Upon a little Recollection this Thought died in Thinking I had placed this illustrious Image before me to have several Views of it. I began with Heroism; and then I presently call'd to Mind how all We Whigs trembled, when We read the Account of the Battle of Oudenarde, where the Prince of Hanover expos'd the most precious Life in Europe, his own most Serene Family only excepted, to more Dangers than did the most daring of his Father's brave Troops, which were led on by him. When I turned my View to Wisdom and Justice, I said, still speaking to myself, Can you pretend not to see the Consummate Wisdom in this Glorious Prince's Conduct, who while all the Monarchs, who are thought the wisest in the Universe, involve themselves and their Subjects in unjust and ruinous Wars, preserves to his happy People as profound a Peace, as the Iniquity of the Utrecht Peace-makers had left them capable of enjoying.

As to Justice, I ask'd myself, and all whom I convers'd with, Where's the Man whose Liberty has been infring'd, or his Property invaded? Every Soul I met, myself, and all to whom I put the Question, had not a Syllable to answer; but a Reverend Doctor refer'd me to Fog and D'Amers. I reply'd, I have read them as constantly as you have, and with as good a Will to believe every Word they said, nay, with as strong Purpose as Desire, to believe it, which seldom fails of Success; but they only speak in Generals, which will serve alike for all Ages, Countries, Courts, Ministers; all Senates, Dyets, Parliaments and People, where there is a Mixture of Good and Bad; and when the World will be without that Mixture, can only be answered by those that shall be living, when it is about to be burnt, and an End to be put to it; but I think it horribly wicked, to pick out whatever one can meet with that is bad in Story, relating to Princes and Ministers of State, and apply it to present Times or Persons, without any Regard to Truth and Likeness, which between you and me, Doctor, is the whole Secret of both Craftsmen and Common Sense Men, as it was of Fog before he came to an untimely End.

THEN as if the Ministry had been a Corpse, which was given to any one or every one to dissect, I fell upon them in my Inquisition most unmercifully. You will do nothing, said I to my dear Self, unless you so blacken them, that People may be as much afraid to come among them, as Birth-day Beaux among a Croud of Chimney Sweepers. Fog, D'Amers, and Common Sense, could do me no Service, because the Filth they had thrown upon them, had been wip'd off by the Standers by as fast as it fell. Every honest Man, even among the Populace, being ready to help another when he sees him bespatter'd by Frenzy or Malice.

As I was no Stranger to the English History, I look'd into it again from Jeffry of Monmouth's Fable, to the last that was published, whether by Oxford-Man or Cambridge-Man; and I could find no Superior Minister so wise, so faithful, so experienced, so vigilant, so diligent, so active, so approv'd by all his Contemporary Ministers abroad, and by all his reasonable and unprejudic'd Countrymen at home, that all the World agreed in Opinion of his High Office, Datur Dignissimo; 'Tis given to the most worthy, which as to the present Times has been, is said, and hereafter will be said, of the Honourable Person who is in it; and I defy'd myself, with the same peremptory Defiance I now do all others, Name the Man, if this is not He.

I presently turned to my List of Grumblers; for you must know, we are furnished with Lists, as at the East-India House, Bank, &c. and according to the Progress each Member has made in Faction, by writing Letters for Fog, D'Amers, or Common Sense, or by speaking out, or voting against the present Constitution and Government, there are one, two, three or four Stars put before his Name. No Man can have more than four Stars, tho' he had narrowly escap'd the Gallows for the Cause, as did the late Viscount B——k. Yet he has but four Stars; and Mr. ———, who has not been a Patriot a Twelve-month, has already four Stars before his Name; but that was with a Prospect of his setting up a new Paper; every Body crying out against the Craftsman, for Dulness and Impertinence. In my List of Grumblers, I found one, indeed, with four Stars, that had Sense and Honesty, as far as is consistent with Self-sufficiency and Relentment: But certainly, said I once more to myself, it cannot be him that Datur Dignissimo might be apply'd; for if a Man's Head is giddy with two or three common Qualities only, what would it be, if he stood elevated as a Pinnacle of the State? Another in my List had also four Stars, who had the Character of Wit and Repartee; but I thought it might be as well ask'd of a Judge, that is to be, whether he can Sing and Dance; as of a superior Minister, if he can write Madrigals and crack Jests. A Third stood in my List, not only with the four Stars, but with a Hand pointing to him, as in Quack Advertisements, by way of Preheminence: I inquir'd of a Grumbler, who was converted by lying in Newgate some Months for a Revenue Debt, why this worthy Member was so dignified and distinguished. Oh! cries this Prefect to me, his Noviciat, whom he was initiating in their mystick Rites: He's a Predestin'd, I shew you something; and out he pull'd a Mezzotinto Print, with two Figures in it; the one, I perceiv'd by the Loss of the Teeth, and the Ruins of a Face, was the once Lord B——k; the other, who seem'd 30 Years younger, had a Pertness in his Look amidst a good deal of Valetudinarian Languor, and over his Head, in a Laurel Wreath, borne up by two Cupids, was this Inscription, Spes Altera Roma. How, says I, what do you mean by B——k the Traitor and Rebel, and this other Person, who as yet is neither, coupling them thus together? Is it that you expect he'll be as zealous for Popery, Slavery, and the Pretender as ever the other was? And do you in like manner expect this from all your Converts? If so ——— Dragons have a Care I meant nothing but a Place or a Pension; and I'll rather hang myself for lack of it, than be hang'd because others could not have what they had cut out for themselves.

It would be well, if all Grumblers would do as this good Man did, who, I hope, will not want his Reward, emerge out of their Political Mire before they are so deep sunk into it, that they cannot get out without leaving a Limb behind them, nor sink deeper without intire Destruction.

A Mail arrived Yesterday from Flanders, with Advice from Petersburg, by Letters from Hamburg of the 8th Instant, O. S. That since the Surrender of Oczakow, four Expresses are arrived there from the Russian Army, with an Account that during the bloody Attack of that Fort, the Turks fought like Desperadoes; that 3000 Russians were killed; and 2000 wounded; that among the former there was no Officer of any Note, but among the latter two Major-Generals.

Two young English Noblemen are set out from Hanover, as are two young Swedish Counts from Stockholm, for Vienna, to make the Campaign in Hungary against the Turks.

According to a Letter by this Mail, of the 3d Inst. O. S. from Vienna, the Prince of Saxe-Hilburghausen himself was attacked by the Turks, and received two Wounds; but the Truth of this is not to be depended on till confirmed.

Letters from Paris of the 28th of August N. S. say, that the Spanish Ambassador there had received an Express from his Court, of the Arrival of the Flota and Azogues from Vera Cruz at Cadiz on the 14th of August N. S. in good Condition.

Extract of a Letter from Capt. Savage of the London, who arrived in the Downs the 20th Inst. from Venice.

On Thursday July 26, in Latitude 36 Degrees North, and 25 Leagues to the Westward of Cape St. Vincent; at 7 o'Clock in the Morning saw the Sea break right a Head, which very much surprised me; so I bore away, and found it to be a Sloop Bottom upwards: At Eleven, I hoisted out my Pinnace, to try to save something; but the Sea was too high: They brought on board her Top-sail Yard and bolt Rope of the Sail, and several fine Fish; at 4 I left her. She had a Lute Stern, a Horse Head, and Blue Quarters; also a clean white Bottom; I judge she overset in the Storm on the 5th of July: She was doubled 4 Streaks below the Waist; had it been Night, we should have gone near to hit her; the Cargo was not out, by her swimming so deep; I judge her to be about 80 Tons, and lately come from England.

Extract of a Letter from Boston, July 10, 1757.

We have Advice by Capt. Hill (who lately arrived from London) That His Majesty had been most graciously pleased to appoint us a new Governor for the Colony of the Massachusetts; which occasion'd the most universal Joy that ever was known thro'out this Province, especially among the better Sort of People, and the Ministers of all Sorts; and in all Companies His Majesty's Health, and His Illustrious Family were drank, with the Duke of Newcastle, and Sir Robert Walpole, and many other loyal Healths; and to a good Governour, and a good Agreement with our Mother Country, and Confusion to Tyrants and Hypocrites.— And we hear the Province of New Hampshire has been quite extravagant in their Rejoicing, as also their Expressions of Loyalty and Thankfulness for so seasonable a Change, which hath at once delivered them from Destruction and Ruin.

And the Lord's-Day following, one of our Ministers preached these Words, Daniel V. 20. But when his Heart was lifted up, and his Mind hardened in Pride, he was deposed from his Kingly Throne, and they took his Glory from him.

And another from Job XXVII. 13. This is the Portion of a wicked Man with God, and the Heritage of Oppressors, which they shall receive of the Almighty.

And a third from Obadiah, ver. 10. For thy Violence against thy Brother Jacob, Shame shall cover thee, and thou shalt be cut off for ever.

Yesterday Se'nnight 5 Companies of the Welch Fusiliers marched from the Neighbourhood of Edinburgh to Berwick, and were to be followed next Day by the other Companies of that Corps.

We hear from Glasgow, That when they received the agreeable News that her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales was safely delivered of a Princess, the Magistrates and Town-Council, with several Persons of Distinction, met in the Council-Hall (which was beautifully illuminated) where they drank the Healths of the King and Queen, their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, the new-born Princess, the Prince and Princess of Orange, the Prince of Saxe-Gotha, the Duke, and the rest of the Royal Family. At each Health there was a Discharge of the Fire-Arms of some Companies of Brigadier Middleton's Regiment quartered there. A great many other Loyal Healths were also drank, and the Night concluded with Ringing of Bells, and other Demonstrations of Joy.

Yesterday about Noon came to Town the Purser of the Defence, Capt. James Montgomery, in the Service of the East India Company, which Ship arrived in the Downs the 21st Instant from Tellicherry. She left St. Helena the 17th of last June. The Day before which arrived there the Shafsbury, Captain Bookie, from the Bay of Bengall, who met at Sea the Harrington, Capt. Jenkins, from Bombay; but parted with her off of the Cape of Good Hope, about the 20th of May last. The Shafsbury and Harrington are the two only Ships expected Home this Season; the Pelham, Capt. Woodford, and the Halifax, Capt. Manley, going Country Voyages.

On the 15th Instant Mr. Foxon of Brentwood, a Gentleman of an Estate between 3 and 400 l. per Annum, riding out with a Couple of Greyhounds, found a Hare sitting, and calling his Dogs, she started, which frighten'd the Horse and he was thrown, the Horse then kick'd him on the Breast: Some Persons in an adjoining Field perceiving this, came up; they found him with a Pencil in his Hand, with which he was attempting to make his Will. He spoke something to them with regard to the Disposal of his Estate, and desired the Horse, which was very vicious, might be shot: They got him into an House; but he soon after expir'd. He has left a Widow and Six Children.

Great Preparations are making at St. James's for the Christening of the young Princess, which is to be on Monday next.

Last Night Baron Hartoff, his Majesty's Principal Secretary for the Affairs of Hanover, lay at the Point of Death at Hampton Court, being given over by his Physicians.

His Majesty has been pleased to appoint George Campbell, Esq; to be a Lieutenant in the Royal Regiment of Horse Guards Blue, commanded by his Grace the Duke of Argyle and Greenwich.

His Grace the Duke of Grafton has been pleased to appoint the Rev. Mr. Joseph Skinner, M. A. to be one of his Majesty's Chaplains Extraordinary.

Phillips, belonging to one of the Custom-house Smacks, is gone with him, and two others as Assistants.

Yesterday one Mr. James who belonged to Clare Market, and had been missing ever since Friday last, was found drowned in a Pond near Sir John Oldcastle; he was taken out and carried to a House at Black Mary's Hole. And this Day the Coroner's Inquest will sit on him.

Last Sunday the Honourable Alexander Campbell, Esq; second Son to the Right Hon. Earl of Marchmont, and his new-married Lady, presented to their Majesties at Hampton Court, and had the Honour to kiss their Majesties Hands.
